Made at the

Victoria Soap Manufactory,

ON YATES STREET, NEAR DOUGLAS, IS second to none for all general household uses. It will save more than half the labor of washing, and does the work complete without the use of raw soda or ammonia, which takes the life out of clothing and is so much used with common brown or rosin soap.

We have now placed our soap with nearly all the grocers in the city, with full instructions on the wrappers, and ask for it a trial. We guarantee it in all respects to the extent of a return of the purchase price if any person can show that we have misrepresented it in any particular.

TO-DAY'S NEWS.

The War Cloud not yet Removed—Lord Dufferin Resigns.

The Adjustment Denounced as a Poor Make-shift.

A Treaty Arranged Between the U. S. and Colombia.

Terrible Conflagration in Brooklyn—Heavy Loss of Lives.

Special Dispatches to THE TIMES.

The Adjustment Denounced.

LONDON, May 5.—The Globe of to-day says, the so called adjustment of the Anglo-Russian dispute is a poor shift which amounts practically to nothing more than a truce for avoiding a collision and which will result in nothing but a transfer of the difficulty from Gladstone's shoulders to those of his successor.

The Money Market.

LONDON, May 5.—12:20 p. m.—Consols opened this morning at 98 for both money and account; at 12:30 they had moved up to 98 3-16, and at this hour are steady at that figure. Russian securities of 1873 opened at 93 and are now 92. Home and foreign securities are strong and steady. Stocks are also steady.

THE VICEROY OF INDIA.

Reported Resignation of Earl Dufferin—Dissatisfied with the Government.

LONDON, 2:30 p. m., May 5. A well accredited rumor is in circulation on the exchange and in semi-official circles that Earl Dufferin has resigned his office as Viceroy of India. For some time it has been known that his Lordship was dissatisfied with Gladstone's policy on the Afghanistan question. With rare tact and ability the Viceroy had worked up the native princes and nobles to a fever heat enthusiasm for England. He considers that his efforts have not been backed up by the English Government, and therefore resigns, a line of conduct that does not surprise the noble lord's admirers.

Death of Gen. McDowell.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.—Brigadier-General Irwin McDowell died last night just as the clock struck 12. His wife, son and daughter surrounded his bedside as he passed away. He was unconscious for many hours before his pulse ceased to beat. His death was due to pyloric disease of the stomach. He had been in a critical condition during the past two weeks on account of poor health and failing strength. He was placed on the retired list October 15, 1882, and has since lived a quiet life with his family in this city.

A Robber Becomes a Pirate.

PANAMA, May 5.—It has become known here that the robber, Preston, who burned Colon, having made his escape has since then seized three steamers at Porto. With this help it is feared he may make trouble unless the U. S. naval forces shall capture him and his vessels.

Central American Troubles.

PANAMA, May 5.—It is reported here on trustworthy authority that a treaty has been concluded between the Government at Bogota and a Minister of the U. S. Government for certain rights of guardianship of all transit, either by rail or canal, across the Isthmus of Panama with special duties of protection to be exercised in accord with the Governments of the U. S. of Colombia. It is understood that by this treaty the Colombian and U. S. Governments will co-operate to maintain the freedom of transit against an attack or attempts to obstruct, and it is believed here that the joint control over the transit route under this treaty, not only authorizes, but makes it the duty of the U. S. Government to give all required aid in maintaining the transit routes for commerce mail and passengers.

FROM THE NORTH.

The Boscowitz Arrives this Morning—Encouraging News.

The steamer Boscowitz arrived down this morning at 4:30, having made the round trip in nine days and a half. She brought the following passengers: M. Hart, Rivers Inlet; Rev. E. Green, Miss Green, J. Gray, Snuggs, Nass; R. H. Hall, Mrs. Hall and 4 children, Capt. Shearburn, Fort Simpson; Geo. Willoscroft, Georgetown; Capt. McFarland, Caulfield, D. Morrison, J. Blake, H. Bode, Skeena; M. Williams, Miss Thomas, and 25 Indians. The mining prospects are reported as very encouraging, and some rich samples are shown from the Nass, Skeena, and Kitsumkaylum. Capt. McFarland and Mr. Caulfield came down to procure the requisite appliances for hydraulic mining, having become satisfied that the indications warrant the expenditure. They go south by first steamer, and after getting the machinery will hasten back again. More positive information as to the diggings at Lorne creek and Kitsumkayum will be received by next steamer, as reports will by that time have arrived at the coast from the mines. There are fifty-seven miners on Lorne creek, and some are engaged in prospecting a creek two miles below, which is considered to be even better than Lorne. Several disputes will have to be settled by the gold commissioner on his arrival. Last year's records are still in Victoria and there are no mining laws on the creek, which are drawbacks to the active prosecution of work.

Ominaca Specimens.

Mr. James Orr, M. P. P., has received specimens of arquerite and copper from Vital creek, Ominaca. Arquerite has only been discovered in two countries, Peru and British Columbia; it is found in the alluvial deposit with gold. The specimens shown is contain 70 per cent of native silver and 30 per cent of quick silver, and were found in the claim of Clifford & May, for which they received a charter from the legislature in 1883.

The Roller Coaster.

The roller coaster will be open on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from 2 to 9 p. m.

The London Bazaar has just received a fine lot of new goods from London, England.

THE VOTE OF CREDIT.

It Passes after a Lengthy Debate in the House of Commons.

Lord Randolph Churchill's Views on the Vote.

LONDON, May 4.—In the House referring to the subject of resumption of communications in London between England and Russia, Gladstone said they would be much facilitated by the more full and exact knowledge which the Government now possessed of the Ameer's views since the meeting between him and Earl Dufferin at Rawal Pindi and valuable topographic information, which had since reached England. A number of members put interrogatories to the Government concerning the trustworthiness of reports, both of Gen. Sir Peter Lumsden's and Gen. Komaroff's.

Gladstone answered in detail, stating in substance that the dispute of the Penjdeh incident had never been a question of trial of any officer, but one which concerned the honor of the two Governments involved in the March agreement. It was not in the power of either party to this agreement to claim exclusive right of interpretation; the speaker believed the agreement would be found sufficiently clear.

Lord Randolph Churchill, the young Conservative leader, now arose and launched into a savage assault on the Government. The argument just made on behalf of the government was a terrible piece of news for those anxious for the safety of the Indian Empire. "The Government," cried his lordship, have made a base, cowardly surrender of every point at issue to Russia. I greatly fear that as a result we have lost India." Lord Randolph continuing said that he protested against the conduct of the Government in submitting a vote of credit on Monday last without giving the slightest indication of their policy, and the exact point at issue with Russia. The latter, he continued, had been for a long time breaking the agreement of 1873 with respect to Central Asia. In regard to the Afghans Lord Churchill insisted that the Russians had long ago passed the boundary which they had promised to respect as the rightful frontier line of the Ameer's dominion. In 1882 a series of pledges were voluntarily given by Russia concerning the boundary, and all of them had been deliberately broken. He said he feared that when the news should become known in India England would lose all respect, sympathy and loyalty of the natives. He declared the history of Russia's negotiations with England was a record of treachery, fraud and falsehood. Remembering the action of the Government in the present matter and the useless sacrifices in the Soudan, it was impossible to repose the slightest confidence in the Government, and it was unfitted to acquiesce in the present vote. He implored the ministers who were dealing with the present crisis to remember the past perfidy of Russia and their duty to England and India.

Mr. Gladstone said there had been no change in the Government's policy since Monday last, when the house unanimously voted in favor of the credit. The Government were trying to obtain a definite Russo-Afghan frontier, and he trusted they would succeed. At present there was no frontier in existence enabling one power to call another to account for passing a forbidden line. He contended that if papers when published showed that the Ameer did not desire an advanced frontier, England had no right to force it on him. In Mr. Gladstone's judgment any appearance of hesitation in agreeing to the credit would be a serious public evil. He had no objection to the sweeping criticism but when possibly there was the prospect of a favorable issue of the difficult crisis he asked the house not to retrograde from what it had already patriotically done. He declared if in such a period of anxiety and difficulty the government were unworthy of being trusted the sooner they were released from their responsibilities the better.

Mr. Henry Labouchere, radical, moved that the vote of credit be reduced from $55,000,000 to $35,000,000.

The motion was rejected by 79 to 29. The majority included the conservative leaders. The Parnellites voted with the minority.

After several motions to adjourn and to adjourn the debate had been voted down, a still further motion to adjourn the house was made, whereupon Mr. Gladstone suggested that if the vote of credit was agreed on the discussion on the subject could be raised on Thursday in committee of supply.

Sir Stafford Northcote assented to this suggestion and the motion to adjourn the house was negatived.

The speaker then put the main question, the vote of credit of $35,000,000 and it was agreed to by a vote of 180 to 20.

The Play "Old 49."

A dispatch from New York, dated May 2, states that Judge Lawrence, in the Supreme Court, rendered a decision in favor of Joaquin Miller in the proceeding brought by him against McKee Rankin, the actor, concerning the play "Old 49." Miller claims that he wrote the play, and the suit was brought to restrain the production of the play by Rankin and for $50,000 damages. Judge Lawrence directed the return of the manuscript to Miller, and that Rankin be enjoined from further production of the play "49." The court also allows the plaintiff $15 per night for the twenty nights that the play was produced.

This play was produced by the McKee Rankin Co. in Philharmonic hall last week. Mr. McKee Rankin, in an interview with a reporter of the Seattle P.-I., after the receipt of the message announcing the judgment, said that Miller did not write the play, and that his company would play "Old 49" in spite of all the Millers in the world.

Chicago's "Boss" After $500,000.

Carter Harrison, of Chicago, is a small politician—a political demagogue. He had the impudence to aspire to the Presidency, then to the Vice Presidency, and then to the Governorship of Illinois. He is the representative of the bad element in politics—is, in fact, the "Boss" of Chicago. He has sued the Chicago Inter Ocean and Edward Lee Brown for $500,000 damages for libeling him, by saying he was a "consort of thieves and a ballot-box stuffer." He will lose the suit.

Philip Hull, Sr., an old Californian, residing near Flagstaff, Arizona Territory, has fallen heir to $80,000. Mr. Hull is seventy-three years old.

BARKERVILLE NEWS.

Far-famed Williams Creek—The Cariboo Cameron's "Lead."

Some days ago there mysteriously appeared among our mountains a man, apparently well stricken in years, the frost of many winters on his brows. It was soon whispered around that Billy Barker had returned, endowed with a golden instinct. He was sought for and received a right royal reception from many an old-timer who had known him in earlier years, and who welcomed him as a veritable Barkervillian, an ancient City-Father, and a rustler from way back. Many summers have passed since he gave name and fame to our city, and although he has experienced reverses and the slipping quality of the yellow dust, yet his natural strength seemed in no wise abated and his spirit as young, hopeful and if possible, more cheerful and buoyant than ever; for was he not soon to strike it; did he not believe thoroughly that he would wrest from those hills their hidden wealth and have his declining years relieved from anxiety? Those familiar with Williams creek will remember that the "Cameron lead" was lost nearly opposite the Hospital grounds, and a few knowing wise heads believed this here towards the left from the main channel there was a cut off leading beneath the hill in very deep ground. Indeed, at various periods very favorable prospects had been found, but no thorough test was ever made on account of the difficulty of washing on left end and depth of ground. Here having sunk his shaft and commenced a tunnel only a few rods from the forks of the main channel, Billy uncovered the nuggets in heaps and loaded his pack mule—in a dream—many worse dreams have become real.

Harry McDermotts many friends down country will be glad to hear that he is quite recovered and has survived almost all traces of the terrible ordeal through which he passed. A desperate encounter with the elements, earth, air, fire and water. Poor Jim Blair is likely to have been hurled against the timbers or rocks, and rendered helpless and unconscious before he reached the bottom of the shaft; he apparently received fewer bruises than Harry. For some days Harry was a veritable, bed-rock boulder, worn, bruised, tossed about and marred and thoroughly impregnated with water, sand, gravel and slum. Time, the scalpel hook, and hose removed the imbedded extraneous matter for while many believe "we are dust," he would have his dust differently. How many have envied the wonderful adventure and his dangers passed and we would take swift advantage of the hour by pouring into the ears of some fair Desdemona. "The fortunes I have passed—most disastrous chances of mining accidents by flood and field, of hair-breadth escapes in the imminent deadly breech." But a retiring disposition, a secluded cabin home and possibly the fear of a Pause upon his head precludes this course to him.

How an enterprising citizen failed to improvise Easter Cheer. He declared the time was in the golden age when flour was cheap at $2 per pound, and eggs at $5 per doz., but alas, in these degenerate (no) days how were (to) children to be furnished with tinted and beautifully decorated symbols of friendship and the community generally to keep up an old and respected custom at present rates. He had heard of incubators and artificially prepared chickens. Six who were left this time must be wasted. Surely sufficient heat could bring incubation in one week and reproduction in five. A cauldron of eggs, large and fresh was procured; heat was applied. A few hours could now be well spent in taking orders. He returns only to find the heat increased to 180. The result the old shy-country chickens before they were hatched. Still he proved a benefactor and philanthops. Immediately on hint of competition, bulletin boards bore the notice. Eggs reduced in price to $1 per doz.

Mr. Cowan has returned from the capital looking well. He assures us that a Cariboo winter is far in advance of the omnigrol climate meted out to Victorians.

It is with pleasure we note the return of Mrs Nason, to take up her abode again amongst us. She and her little family seem to have borne the long journey wonderfully well—children fresh and happy as new-born daisies.

April, so far, has been less sunny and more blustering than March. All hydraulic companies are making preparations for the spring freshet. A great harvest of snow lies on the mountains.

Barkerville, April 25th, 1885.

Col. Ouimet Returns to his Regiment.

A St. Paul dispatch of the 28th reports that Col. Ouimet, of the Forty-fifth, was in St. Paul yesterday on his return from Ottawa to join his regiment, now near Edmonton. He says that his mission was a secret one and declines to divulge the nature of his conference with the authorities at Ottawa. The government, he states, has little fear of any serious trouble with Riel and his followers, and has no doubt but that the rebellion will be crushed out in a few brief weeks. The authorities are disposed to deal fairly with the settlers and to allow any just claims. The commission now in that region will thoroughly investigate all causes of complaint and allegations of injustice and at the crushing out of the rebellion, the Government, upon the commission's report, will endeavor to mete out justice to all. Col. Ouimet very naturally declines to criticise the action of the Government. He says that the settlers have been placed in a difficult position, but the causes and future treatment of the problem is a political question, which he can not, as a soldier, discuss. With the rebellion over and himself once more in parliament he will probably have something to say upon the matter.

In a Prosperous Condition.

Reports indicate that Oregon and Washington Territory are said to be in a remarkably prosperous condition. A general revival is noticed in almost all branches of business. Much California capital is finding investment in the lumber regions of Washington, and the fruit lands of the Willamette valley are receiving attention from another class of investors. Lands of all grades are increasing in value. The coming spring and summer will bring in an immense immigration, attracted thither by the cheapness of the land and the rapid development of the country.

TERRIBLE FIRE.

A Large Manufacturing Building in Brooklyn Crumbles to the Ground.

Five Hundred Operatives Within the Walls, Many of Whom are Missing.

Special to THE TIMES.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 5.—Shortly after 9 o'clock this morning there was a crash at 55 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, and people on looking up from the street saw that the roof of a building had fallen in and that a portion of the wall had also fallen. They could hear the screams of people injured, and it seemed but a moment when a volume of smoke rolled up showing that the building had taken fire. Hundreds of men, women and girls were at work at various branches of the business carried on in the building, which covered considerable ground, having wings which extended through from Atlantic to State streets. As soon as the crash was heard of the falling of the roof, hundreds of those employed in the building endeavored to make their way out by every avenue of escape, and some who were last to reach the street appeared with begrimed faces and blood streaming from wounds which they had received from falling timbers. The excitement in the neighborhood became very great and in a short time the wives of men who were known to be working in the building, and the parents of girls who were employed, blocked the streets. Three alarms of fire were sent out, and the services of a large number of police had to be called in to keep the people out of the way of danger. It was reported at first that about 100 girls who were employed in the Miles Haynes Bolting Works, which was on the top floor where the roof fell in, were killed, but it appears most of the girls made their escape by climbing on to the roofs of tenement houses. The buildings were occupied by 20 small manufacturers. There were about 500 men and women employed therein. It was five story, erected 27 years ago. The woodwork was burning like tinder when firemen arrived. They found many young women at windows screaming wildly for help, their retreat being cut off. Firemen quickly ran up ladders, but the girls were hemmed in, and many fell back into the flames before help could reach them. The character of the building hindered the efforts of the firemen. It was ascertained that the engineer of the factory, Daniel J. Lawery, was one of the victims. He was killed by falling of the left wing. The cause of the fire was the overturning of one the boilers of the soap factory on the second floor. The west wall of the middle wing on Atlantic street had settled. Workmen were screwing it up with jacks. The middle jack had been screwed up too high. It was lowered, when the whole weight of the wall came upon the two ends and end of the wall when it fell with a crash.

VICTORIA INDIAN RESERVE.

Offers for the Purchase and Acquisition Thereof Received by Government.

Our Ottawa correspondent writes that in answer to Mr. Blake, the other day, Sir John Macdonald said that no negotiations had been entered into for the sale of the Indian Reserve, across the Victoria Arm, from the city of Victoria, B. C. Offers and applications had been made for the acquisition of this land. It was not proposed to sell the reserve, either by private sale, or public auction, until the question of the Indian consent was settled.

A Red Cross Association.

The Standard's reference to the ladies who are interesting themselves, in forming a Red Cross Association, was rather ungallant and quite out of place. No doubt our contemporary is of the opinion that the proposition is a little premature, and that nurses are only required when there is something to nurse. But the ladies, we are assured, were prompted by patriotic motives, believing that the knowledge that wounded and sick soldiers would be tenderly cared for, would have the effect of causing many volunteers who would otherwise stand coolly aloof. We confess when we first heard that the ladies of Victoria were forming themselves into an association to care for the wounded, we thought it would have been more in order had they formed a recruiting club. The soldiers are first wanted; and we haven't got them yet. The nurses would follow in good season. But on second thought we believe it to be a clever stratagem on the part of the ladies to create a patriotic glow—an indifference to bullets and bombshells—in the breasts of the fighting material of the city. On that ground we heartily endorse the movement.

Kindness Did It.

A Cloverdale, Cal., dispatch says: Considerable sensation was caused here last week by the marriage of Peter Munroe, a stage-driver on the Sanderson stage line to Mendocino, to a Mrs. Taylor, who is reputed to be an English heiress of considerable wealth. The affair has a tinge of romance, owing to the following facts. The first meeting was on board the stage when Peter was handling the ribbons. During the trip down from Mendocino the lady became indisposed and the usual kindness of the driver was brought into play, which resulted in a fond attachment and a proposal of marriage. The driver was accepted, and a few days after the ceremony was consummated at the American Hotel. Pete will not handle the ribbons any longer, but will retire on his laurels.

Origins of the People.

By the last census, 1881, the origins of the people of British Columbia are given as follows: African, 274; Chinese, 4350; Dutch, 94; English, 7297; French, 916; German, 858; Indians, 25,661; Irish, 3172; Italians, 143; Jewish, 11; Russian and Polish, 48; Scandinavian, 236; Scotch, 2302; Spanish and Portuguese, 141; Swiss, 40; Welsh, 299; various other origins, 342; not given, 1862.

Heard from Abroad.

Col. Holmes the other day received a letter from an officer with the forces at Abu Klea, and one from another officer with the Northwest volunteers, stationed thirty miles N. W. of Humboldt. These officers speak highly of their prospects. Both were formerly members of the Col.'s battery in Quebec.

MRS. GLADSTONE occupies a seat in the gallery of the House of Commons every time her husband speaks.

THE port of Vladivostock, the Russian naval station west of the isle of Jesso, on the sea of Japan, was closed by sinking torpedoes in the ship channels.

PROFESSOR R. B. ANDERSON, the new United States Minister to Denmark, began life as an apple peddler in Milwaukee. He attained his present position by honest hard work.

IT IS rumored that ex-Secretary of State Frelinghuysen's real ailment is insanity, consequent upon his arduous duties in Washington, and subsequent private and political troubles.

THE Mexican government has taken vigorous measures to guard against the introduction of cholera at various seaports. Vessels from countries where cholera is reported will be subjected to vigorous quarantine.

THE bill to federate the British Australian colonies has been read a second time in the British House of Lords. At present the bill includes but five of the six colonies, New South Wales still refusing to enter. It is believed, however, that she will soon overcome her present objections to the federation scheme.

THE heaviest snow storm ever known in that part of the country set in at Denver Thursday night, and lasted without interruption until 6 Friday evening. Fully twenty inches of snow fell, as much as the aggregate of the previous falls of the whole winter. Many roofs were crushed.

SECRETARY BAYARD and SENOR BECERRA, the Columbian minister at Washington, have been having quite a lengthy correspondence regarding a decree of the Colombian government closing certain of its ports to foreign commerce. The gist of the position taken by the Secretary of State is that if Colombia can maintain a blockade, well and good; but it will not be recognized by the United States.

No more economical and beneficial method of disposing of city garbage could be adopted than that in use in the great city of London. There it is burned in large furnaces, with shafts 150 feet high and of an external diameter at the base of ten feet. The resultant ashes are carried off in barges and are used in making bricks. The cost of a furnace or two would be very insignificant as compared with the sanitary results to the city.

THE discovery of an immense ledge of white metal in Antelope Valley, Cal., is creating considerable interest. The character of the stuff puzzles all mining men to whom it has been submitted. It is fusible at first, but after the first time it yields to nothing but a mixture of acids. The whole category of white metals have been gone over in the vain hope of making it answer to some kind. A pound of rock yields one-half pound of the metal, and there are millions of tons in the plant. It appears to carry a percentage of platinum.

IT is curious to contrast the expenditures of the great nations of the world. Great Britain proposes, as stated above, to spend $144,000,000 in carrying on her Government this year. It cost her foe, Russia, $389,000,000 to carry on her Government in 1883. What she intends to spend this year outsiders can only conjecture. She has no Parliament to criticise her budget. The United States managed to run the machine of Government for $244,000,000 in 1884. But France, poor heavily burdened France, squeezes $700,000,0000 out of her people for the support of her government and the payment of interest on her public debt. The difference of course arises from the cost of armies and navies in warmaking countries, and their cost in countries which live in peace. France spends $166,000,000 a year on her army and navy; Russia $115,000,000 in time of peace; England $195,000,000, including annual grants to India; while $80,000,000 defrays our expenditures under these heads. War is an expensive luxury, as England and Russia may discover before they get through with the dispute about the Afghan boundary.

HAD TO TOE THE MARK.

Ottawa dispatches confirm the announcement recently made in THE TIMES that the instrucions given the commissioners appointed to investigate the Northwest troubles were such as to draw from the Government an acknowledgement that the claims and demands of the half-breeds were such as to require recognition. By these instructions they are empowered to grant every half-breed head of a family residing outside of Manitoba previous to 1870, 160 acres of the land of which he is in possession, and to each child born before that date, 240 acres; the deficit, where such occurs, to be made up by the granting of scrip. And half-breds who have resided in the territories previous to 1883 and are not in possession of any land are to receive scrip redeemable to the extent of 160 acres for each head of a family. The appointment of this commission, with the instructions now given it, six months ago would have adjusted all differences and ensured a peaceful settlement. It would have spared the half-breeds and Indians the losses and final defeat incident to a resort to violence. It would have spared the country the expenditure of millions of money, in the carrying out of a costly expedition. And it would have saved the lives of those settlers who have been foully murdered, and of the men on either side who have fallen or are yet to fall. These are proof that the conditions of the half-breeds are practically just, because they are now freely conceded. The Government is without excuse for its deadly delay, the consequences of which it now has to face in the shape of concessions and the suppression of rebellion united. Strong reasons have already been given in explanation of the strange phenomenon that Indian, half-breed and white settler seem inclined to make common cause against the Government in the outlying settlements of the Northwest.

Thus the Government has again been compelled to abandoned positions it had assumed relative to the Indians and half-breeds. Failing in having their grievances recognized in other way, these deluded people have arisen in hostile attitude against the Crown. That they have been ill-advised there can be no doubt. Those in authority over these people were deaf to their remonstrances, and the consequences are now only too well-known. Agitation and a determined apposition compelled the Government to abandon the enforcement of the Dominion Liquor Act, until such times as its validity had been tried before the Privy Council. In other cases equally glaring, the remedy sought for has only been attained after a severe struggle.

This Province is now waging a war with the Dominion on the Chinese question. Year after year petitions and other remonstrances have been forwarded to Ottawa, but with apparently no effect in alleviating the difficulty. The result of the abortive commission is already known to our readers. It is exactly that which might have been expected to emenate from the politician. For a considerable time it was made a hobby horse for such a class to ride into positions of trust and influence. Much insincerity has been indulged in by many of those who have championed the peoples' cause against this crying evil. Equally guilty in this respect has been the conduct of present Government with that of the Federal. The question now has passed from the political arena into the hands of the people themselves, who, in unmistakable language, have placed their views on the question on record. The responsibility of future action will rest on the government. The warnings so often made should not pass unheeded any longer. We are aware that at present it has its hands full of trouble within itself. Its course in remedying our troubles is clear and distinct, and if carried out in accordance with the wishes of the people, it shall justly merit our gratitude.

MAJOR WALSH ON THE REBELLION.

Major Walsh, who for many years commanded the Northwest Mounted Police, and after whom Fort Walsh is named, after an absence of some years from the country, has returned to the Northwest. He had great control over the Indians and half-breeds in that country, and has been sent back again with the view of exercising his influence over the Indians to ensure their friendliness to the government. The major has stated that the trouble should have been settled long ere this, and unless finished within a few weeks it will assume gigantic proportions. Being asked what he thought of General Middleton's capacity of handling an affair of this kind he replied: I have no doubt the general is an able and experienced officer, according to military ideas, but his course since he took command shows that he cannot handle this business as it should be handled. He should be all front, and push right through, but with his large amount of stores, heavy guns and mass of infantry, he may be delayed through over-cautiousness until fresh disasters occur.

WINNIPEG has reason to be proud of her young men. Already three battalions of volunteers have gone to the front, the 90th leading the van. Raw and untrained though they were, they did not flinch in the face of danger, and at the Clarke's Crossing fight, with an unseen foe, there was not a man dismayed, although casualties, many of them fatal, were happening all around. There is mourning in many a Winnipeg home to-day; but above the grief of friends and kindred is the sound of public applause for the heroes who nobly did their duty and died in the performance. Well done Winnipeg!

BY THE GATE OF THE SEA.

A NOVEL.

By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY.

The searcher after the philosopher's stone had found it, but not where he had expected. Everything had grown golden for him. The simile is poverty-stricken, but there is no simile which will express the physical wealth of a heart which for the first time has given away all its substance.

It was time for lovers' confidences, and they were exchanged. The sensible child had gone full tilt round a leafy corner, and the young man and his sweetheart lingered at a stile. The child carolled with a wonderfully sweet, shrill voice fifty yards away, and the elders talked.

"You remember," said Tregarthen, "the day on which we first met?"

"Yes," she answered, with a delicious shyness. His ardent eyes—she thought she had never seen anything so tender, ardent as they were—and her bashful glance met for a moment, and she blushed a little.

"I was lying on the grass," he said, "on the top of the cliff, above the landing-place, when I heard your voice, and it awoke me."

"Was I so boisterous?" she asked, smiling, with her eyes upon the ground.

"No," he answered, with a little tender laugh, which of itself was a lover's flattery, "but it awoke me—from a curious dream," he added, with an air of odd reluctance.

"Indeed?" she said, questioningly.

Tregarthen began to wish in a vague way that he had not mentioned this. His goddess might not care to know that one of her rarest charms had reminded him of an actress. But, having begun, he felt bound to go on; so he spoke with a feigned lightness, and looked anywhere rather than at his sweetheart's face.

"I suppose you don't know," he began, "what a lovely voice you have?" She made no reply to this, but still looked demurely on the ground at her feet. "When I first heard it I was dreaming, and I distinctly heard the words, 'Oh, Jupiter, how weary are my spirits!'"

"That was not strange," she answered, looking up at him—"I spoke them."

"Did you?" he asked with some confusion. All this seemed to have been said and done aforetime, and to have led to some unhappiness which now again threatened from the near future. Everybody has experienced that curious sensation.

"What was your dream?"

"Oh, my dream," he answered. "It was nothing. I dreamed I was at the play and I saw Rosalind upon the stage."

She looked up at him swiftly, with a hint of fear and half a hint of resolution in her face. He struck out with a transparent pretense of being perfectly at his ease, and cut down a nettle with his walking-cane.

"Your voice reminded me," he said, after a little pause, "of the most beautiful voice I had ever heard till then. I even thought I recognized it, and I walked down to meet you, and found that I had made a blunder."

"In meeting me!" she asked.

He laughed again and their eyes met. In hers there was a tender triumph and gayety which answered her own question fairly well, even without the aid of his, which beamed with admiration.

"No," he answered, "but in dreaming that that lovely voice had ever sounded from the stage." He went on more at ease. "And yet the fancy haunted me all day." She was looking on the ground once more, and with the point of her parasol was turning a little pebble over and over. She stooped so that her face was hidden from him by the wide-brimmed summer hat she wore. If this were coquetry, the fashion of the day favored it, for at the drooping edge of the width of plaited straw was a fringe of fine black lace some two or three inches deep, and he would have had to fall upon his knees to see her face. Could he have seen it he could not have failed to notice how flushed she was, and what a look of fear and shame was in her eyes.

"Who was the lady," she asked, "whose voice so resembled mine?"

"A Miss Churchill," said Tregarthen. "A delightful actress. The most charming actress I ever saw." It seemed necessary to make as much as might reasonably be made of Miss Churchill's perfections to excuse any comparison, however trivial, between her and the woman of his heart, who not only was not an actress and was a gentlewoman, but was also, and of course, beyond comparison with anybody. "I saw her play Rosalind," he hurried on, "and since the first words I heard you speak were the first words I heard her speak, the resemblance of the voices was accidentally heightened."

"Did you wish very much to see Miss Churchill?" asked the young lady. "Were you very much interested in her."

"Not at all," cried Tregarthen eagerly. "I had forgotten her—until I heard the voice."

"Were you disappointed when you found that it was only—me?"

"Only you!" said the lover, and would not condescend to add to that simple but sufficient disclaimer, except by possessing himself first of her hand and then of her waist. For a while she bent her head and refused to allow him to steal the merest glance at her face, but by-and-by she turned upon him gently and gazed full in his eyes for a moment, while her figure yielded itself more freely to his embrace, and no longer repulsed him by its rigidity.

"If I had turned out to be Miss Churchill," she asked him, "should you—" She paused, but the very silence was eloquent.

"Have loved you!" said Tregarthen. "No. I could not have fallen in love with an actress." It seemed to him that there might be a touch of jealousy in the appeal, and he was in the mood to be tender to all love's fancies, however shadowy and unreal they might be.

"Why not?" she asked. "There are many good women who are actresses, surely."

"No doubt," he answered, lightly. "Many. But you rub the bloom from the peach if you handle it ever so gently. An actress gains something more than most women hope for or care for, but she must be content to lose something—a delicacy, a fineness which is not easy to describe, but means much to a man with any refinement of mind."

He was far from being actually dishonest in saying this, and yet he was not precisely honest. Left to himself and his own judgment he would not have thought these thoughts at all, but the fancy that his betrothed had that visionary jealousy of the actress moved him to make the jealousy impossible.

"But if you had met her, and had fallen in love with her," said the girl, "and had then found that she was an actress—that would have made no difference to you?"

"Yes," he said, gravely, and as if considering the matter, "a serious difference."

"I fancied men thought differently," she said, with some little heat of scorn. "I fancied that they did not altogether care so much for those of us who live along in the one little groove of household cares and small accomplishments, and silly joys and sorrows."

"I shall ask you to achieve no out-of-doors greatness," Tregarthen answered, fondly; "though you are more fit to shine in the world's eye than any other woman now alive." The young man was not a fine judge of verse, and it was natural to think the Laureate's outbearings inferior to those of the woman he himself was in love with. "Be as great as you will, but shine at home, my dear, and let me worship you."

That was a pretty programme, and the girl found no fault with it as it applied to her own prospects. But she had rather—how much rather—that her future husband should have thought better of Miss Churchill's profession. It was clear that he suspected nothing, imagined nothing, but it was a pain to have a secret, though it were as harmless as her own. For Miss Churchill, though an actress, was as pure as a daisy, and nobody knew better than Miss Farmer how little evil the stage had taught her, though there are millions who know infinitely better how much evil it has the power to teach.

One unavoidable result came out of this conversation. Miss Farmer buried Miss Churchill, and resolved that the actress should know no resurrection. But then (as people unfairly or secretly entombed with fears and suspicions hanging around them have a prescriptive right to do) Miss Churchill assumed ghostlike airs and revisited the upper world and peopled the sexton's life with unreal terrors. Tregarthen had taught the girl to love him. She had been an apt and willing pupil, and had learned to love him well. She was of a large and generous nature, affectionate rather than passionate, but inclined to cling to the object of her affection with life-long tenacity. There are few women who would not have kept her innocent secret rather than run the risk of losing a lover. And Tregarthen was the one man in the world to her, as a woman's first love always is—the one possible idol. The mere thought of losing him was cruel beyond expression; the mere fancy that she might risk his loss was scarcely tearable. She so honored and reverenced and loved him that she was forced to deceive him. That is not good morality, but it is admirable feminine logic.

The courtship went on, and Gorbay and the county beyond the limits of Gorbay discussed it, and the whole were content with it. Tregarthen might have looked higher in spite of those regimental escapades of his, for the last scion of one of the oldest houses in that part of England, where houses are so amazingly old, might think himself almost any man's equal. He was not a millionaire, but he had enough, and was unusually personable. Everybody was persuaded that the match, from Miss Farmer's point of view, was all that could be desired.

Within nine months of their first speech with each other the pair became man and wife, and set up housekeeping in Gorbay. They had an exquisitely appointed house, standing in the midst of some eight acres of well-timbered ground and surrounded by trim gardens. While they lived here the old mansion on Tregarthen Island was to be restored to something of its former grandeur, and Mrs. Tregarthen insisted upon having a hand in this. She insisted on having so influential a hand in it that she placed the whole of her own modest fortune in her husband's hands and bade him make that suffice.

"You bring me the grandeur of an old name," she said, "and I claim to have my share in its honors. If you refuse me this I only half divide them."

Tregarthen, after many affectionate disputes, took the money.

"Whatever is mine is yours," he said, "and whatever is yours is mine. It is like the right hand giving to the left."

"Precisely," said his wife, well pleased, and the architect was busy at once. By the beginning of July the builders were at work, and the young couple had great joy in accusing each other of extravagance then, and watching the slow growth of the old place to a new being. Tregarthen's funds were snugly invested, and there were ample means to keep the regifted house in a reasonable state. Meantime, in other matters they were content to retrench, and Mrs. Tregarthen wrote industriously at a romance on a large scale, determined not to cost her husband a penny in dresses, and to win an anonymous fame, of which he, who alone he did have the secret, should be as proud as she was of him.

Visitors came thickly to Tregarthen that summer, some, who had archæological tastes from afar, but on seeing the house once before it assumed its new form. It was no matter of surprise therefore, when a couple of sturdy boatmen pulled over a party of ladies and gentlemen, with a fat and spectacled savant at their head, and the fat and spectacled one began to wander about among the stone and the mortar, delivering a little lecture to his followers as he went. The married pair were in the habitable part of the house, and at the moment when the boat grounded at the Seagate Mrs. Tregarthen was receiving a confession from her husband. He was standing at the window from which he had watched her on her first visit to the island, and was telling her, with no shamefaced ness, how he had kept her in sight after he parted from her. It was not from any standpoint but her own a deed to be rewarded, but she kissed him for it with all her heart, and they went gayly out together for a ramble on the cliffs. Before they started, Tregarthen took a look at the approaching party through the single-barreled opera-glass.

"We can go out with a clear conscience, my dear," he said; "there is no one we know among them."

They had not left the house long when an architect's clerk came racing after them and asked Tregarthen's presence. The architect himself was on the ground, and desired his opinion on some question or another which could only be decided on the spot.

"Walk on," said Tregarthen to his wife—"I shall overtake you."

She answered with a smile and a nod, and rambled slowly over the verdurous slopes, and enjoyed the fresh sea-breeze. In a while she looked back, and, seeing no sign of her husband, she sat in the shelter of an overhanging bowlder, and, sinking down in the soft mosses, surrendered herself to happy broodings upon her husband, her home, his love and her own, and the cloudless sky that overhung their sweet domestic life. She was so deep sunk in reverie, and the mosses hereabout were so soft and thick that a wandering footstep near at hand failed to reach her ear, and she was a little startled to find a picturesque young man baring his head before her with an almost theatrical air of homage.

"Miss Churchill!" said the picturesque young man, in accents of delighted surprise. "I was assured the world was not robbed of you, but I am amazed to find you here; amazed and charmed."

She did not recognize him, and arose with some indignation at the familiarity of his tone. She was startled by his sudden coming, too, and at the first flash she saw danger in the presence of any man who had known Miss Churchill.

"I am Mrs. Tregarthen, sir," she said, haughtily and coldly.

"I beg pardon," said the picturesque young man, still standing hat in hand before her. "I cannot be mistaken. I had the honor to meet you at 'The Mirror.' My name is Marsh—Ronald Marsh. I owed the pleasure to Mr. Lorrimer."

"I have no recollection of the circumstances," she said, even more coldly than before.

Mr. Ronald Marsh smiled with no touch of embarrassment. It was a little odd that there were people in the world who did not leap at the chance of talking to him, but the fact was indisputable, and he was used to it.

"I beg your pardon again," he said, with a graceful wave of his sombrero. "At least I may have the gratification of being assured that I am not in error in assuming you to be Miss Churchill."

Training tells in all things, and there was a little ring of the stage in her lovely voice as she answered him.

"I was Miss Churchill, sir; but I have no desire to resume acquaintance with any person who knew me by that name."

Mr. Ronald Marsh flushed to the roots of his hair, and doffed his sombrero with a final bow. She moved past him with flashing eyes and head erect, and, sweeping thus round the edge of the great bowlder, met Tregarthen face to face.

No 116—A BY-LAW.

Respecting the Fire Limits, Wooden Buildings, and the Storage of Hay and Straw.

IN AMENDMENT OF THE EXISTING BY-Laws be it enacted by the Mayor and Council of the Corporation of the City of Victoria as follows:

1. Section 2 of "The By-Law for Prohibiting the Erection of Wooden Buildings, 1859 Amendment By-Law 1883" is hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof the following substituted:

"2. That portion of the City of Victoria which is contained within the limits hereinafter described namely—commencing at the north-west corner of lot 127, thence running easterly along the northern boundary of the said lot to Store street, thence easterly across Store street in a straight line to the centre of Fisgard street thence easterly along the centre of Fisgard street to the centre of Douglas street, thence southerly along the centre of Douglas street to the centre of Courtenay street, thence along the centre of Courtenay street to the northeast corner lot 8, thence along the northern boundary of lot 8 to the shore of Victoria Harbor, thence along the shore line of Victoria Harbor to the point of commencement,—is hereby declared to be within the Fire Limits of the said city."

2. No addition to or alteration of any wooden building within the said Fire Limits shall be made.

3. No building other than with main walls of brick, iron or stone, and roofing of incombustible material, shall be erected or placed within the said Fire Limits.

4. It shall be lawful for the Mayor and Council of the said city to authorize by resolution any officer therein named to pull down or remove any building which shall have been constructed or placed in contravention of this By-Law; and all expenses reasonably incurred in pulling down or removing any such building shall be repaid by the owner or owners thereof to the Treasurer of the said Corporation, and shall be recoverable with costs in a summary manner before the Police Magistrate or any other Justice of the Peace having jurisdiction within the said city.

5. In this By-Law the word "building" shall not apply to any shed within the curtilage of another building and used exclusively for the storage of fuel for consumption in such other building, such shed not exceeding ten feet by twelve feet in superficial linear measure and ten feet in height, nor shall it apply to any shed erected or to be erected wholly on or over the wooden piles of a wharf on the water front; but no shed shall hereafter be erected on any wharf within the said Fire Limits other than with roofing of incombustible material.

6. The quantity of hay or straw or hay and straw permitted to be stored or kept for sale or use in any building within the Fire Limits shall not exceed the following, namely:

For every Livery or Hack Stable, 15 tons.
For storage or sale, 15 tons.
For private consumption, 2 tons.

7. Every By-Law or portion of a By-Law which is inconsistent with any provision of this By-Law is hereby repealed.

8. This By-Law may be cited as the "Fire Limits and Wooden Buildings By-Law 1885."

Passed the Municipal Council the 8th day of April, A. D. 1885.

Reconsidered and finally passed the Council the 22nd day of April, 1885.

NO. 117—A BY-LAW

To Amend the Buildings Removal By-Law, 1884.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE MAYOR AND Council of the Corporation of the City of Victoria as follows:

1. Section 2 of the Buildings Removal By-Law, 1884 is hereby amended by striking out the word "Application" in the first line and substituting the word "applicant" therefor, and by striking out "$5" and substituting "$10" therefor.

2. Section 4 of the said By-Law is hereby amended by striking out the words "one hundred" between the words "least" and "dollars" and substituting the words "two hundred and fifty" therefor, and by striking out all the words after the word "dollars."

3. Section 5 of the said By-Law is hereby amended by striking out the words "any person moving" at the commencement thereof, and substituting the words "every person who has obtained permission as aforesaid to remove."

4. The said By-Law is hereby further amended by inserting therein the following clause as section 6 and by striking out the figure 6 and substituting the figure 7 at the commencement of the section now numbered "6. Every permission to remove any building as aforesaid shall state the number of days within which such removal is to be effected; and every person to whom such permission shall have been granted who shall fail to complete the removal therein sanctioned within the time therein limited therefor shall forfeit and pay to the Treasurer of the said Corporation the sum of $10.00 for each and every day or portion of a day that he shall be in default in the premises, and in every such case it shall be lawful for the Mayor or a majority of the Street Committee of the Council of the said City to cause the building to be removed from any street or public thoroughfare and all costs and expenses attending such removal shall be repaid by the owner or owners of such building to the Treasurer of the said Corporation and shall be recoverable with costs in like manner as any penalty incurred for the breach of a By-Law.

5. This By-Law may be cited as "The Buildings Removal Amendment By-Law 1885."

Passed the Municipal Council the 8th day of April, A. D. 1885.

Reconsidered and finally passed the Council the 22nd day of April, 1885.

CITY AND PROVINCE.

—The colachans in the Fraser this year are scarce.

—The Dominion snag boat Sampson is lying idle at Brownsville.

—Three able-bodied men are anxious for an introduction to the "society editor."

—Tenders are asked for the construction of a school and fire engine house at Port Moody.

—The East Coast and Mainland steamers to-day brought in a large number of passengers.

—There is no abatement in the effort to form a Highland infantry company in New Westminster.

—There were 47 prisoners in the jail this morning, 14 being in the chain-gang and 33 in the yard.

—Steamer Western Slope will take the place of the Otter on the Burrard Inlet route after this week.

—The Empire which arrived to-day from San Francisco, brought merchandise valued at $14,167.

—Eight hundred and twenty-four barrels of flour were shipped from San Francisco for this port during April.

—The bush fires in the Port Moody locality have spent their strength and danger is now considered as past.

—The Port Moodyites have abandoned the proposed celebration of the 24th May, but will demonstrate on the 1st July—Dominion day.

—The merchandise and produce exports from San Francisco to this province during the month of April amounted in value to $100,495.

—The Boscowitz brought from the north 30 tons of salt and smoked oolachans, 2 tons of furs and 14,000 feet of lumber.

—Col. Holmes has received offers from over one hundred and fifty able bodied men on the Island railway to join the volunteer movement.

—The roads and streets are very dry and dusty owing to the lack of rain. A good shower is badly needed to settle the dust and assist vegetation.

—Strangers visiting the Mainland in search of town property, timber limits, or farming lands, should call on Rand Bros., real estate brokers, New Westminster, B. C.

—The Daisy has been chartered by the People's Line, and will be put on the Nanaimo route. She is a screw steamer of 54 tons, and was built chiefly for passenger traffic.

—Freight arrived by Sound steamer: H B Co, Todd & Son, Marvin & Tilton, Sehl, Earle, Cameron, Anderson & A, Strouss & Co, Mrs Armstrong, Lemos & Co, Baker & F, Janion.

—Steamer Empire arrived at noon from San Francisco with the following passengers: Thos Elliott, J J Robinson, W Doyle, Louis Luhr and George Whittiker, and seven for the Sound.

—During her up trip last Wednesday the Louise ran foul of one of the buoys in the Fraser river. The shock alarmed the passengers, who were apprehensive that something serious had happened.

—Steamer Princess Louise brought the following from the Mainland: Mr and Mrs Spinks, Miss McKenzie, Mr and Mrs Phillips, Judge Crease, T Humphrey, M M English, White, G W Grauts, Yorke, Williams, McDonald, Miles Thomas, Hetley, Golden, Goddard and others.

—The steamer McNaught, seized by the authorities at New Westminster, was recently purchased by Mr. W. B. Townsend, and re-christened the Gladstone. She is to be overhauled and put upon the Fraser river route to Yale.

—Letters are detained for postage, addressed to: John Tomas, Sydney, N. S. W.; G. B. Dolbell, San Francisco; J. E. Merrett, Wood river, Idaho; John Gower, Menlo Park, Cal.; Mrs. M. Morrison, Maple Bay; Chas. Newell, Portland Oregon; John Gilmore, Nicola Valley; H. Marriner, Cowichan; Woh Chong, Seattle.

—The committee, appointed at the public meeting, met last night and perfected arrangements for forwarding the resolutions to the Dominion Government and also to the representatives. It was also decided to organize an anti-Chinese society, in order to be able to carry out the sentiments of those opposed to that class of immigrants.

—A severe depression prevails in commercial and manufacturing circles on the mainland. A few failures have already occurred and others are anticipated. Such a condition of affairs has not existed for some years. A change for the better is eagerly looked for. The proposed terminal improvements may prove beneficial in this respect.

—Peter Allen was brought down by the Barbara Boscowitz to serve out a term of imprisonment in the jail for beating his wife Jane at Naas river. The offence took place on the 17th of April, and Judge Elliott sentenced the prisoner to six months' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $10 or an additional three months' imprisonment.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

(THE TIMES wishes it to be distinctly understood that it is in no way responsible for, and does not necessarily agree with its correspondents.)

Wigs.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

DIC MIHI! DAMONIAS, CUJUS PECUS?

SIR,—Tell me, Mr. Editor, whose are they, and what are they for, these relics of a by-gone barbarism, when sheep skin alone could effect a legal act, and only hoary horse hair keep the flies from off the lawyers, luminous brow? There was a time in the Feudal Ages when they may have served a purpose, when the turbulent throng may have been awed into submissive silence under the terrible spectacle. When the face was smooth shaven, the hair powdered and curled after this self same absurd fashion, these legal wigs were doubtless in harmony with the surroundings, and were then, perhaps, the more readily adopted, on account of convenience in saving their busy wearers the time otherwise spent at a barbers. There may be something about a gown that wraps a man with majesty, that clothes him with the garb of conscious power and drapes his hidden form to match the voluminous thoughts that flow from his dexterous tongue. But what can be urged in favor of this wig? Made from the bleached switching member of some long defunct quadrupid, the tail of a dead horse is put on the head of a live barrister to add dignity thereto! When we gaze at him standing there in the ludicrous attempt to look solemn, with the ends of that inspiring millinery dangling down his neck, the absurdity dawns upon us; and, when, between the scanty curls, we spy the aboriginal occupant striving in vain to eject the intruding squatter, the situation becomes painful. On the venerable brow of the judge the hoary appendage may be becoming; but when, on some youthful sprig of the law, in front we see a yellow or brown chinwhisker, what use attempting to conceal with this thin disguise the color of the rest of his brain adjunct? No;

Be it green, or be it red,
The wig cannot hide the barrister's head.

It will provoke a contempt of Court to look at it. This remnant of antiquity has no proper place in a young country. Age alone would make it incongruous. Then why cherish it? It is a morbid spirit which would carry about with it the withered skeletons of its bygone ancestors, to remind us that time is fleeting, that we will soon all be a thing of the past. Wearing one of these wigs, it may be well to die. But preserve us from standing up on the day of judgment under a barrister's head-dress. Is it too much to ask our kind and considerate Legislature to save us from future contempt in the eyes of intelligent strangers, to defend the bar from the ridicule of all who have not become accustomed to the cruel spectacle, and to consign to the oblivion of a charitable past those wigs which the lawyers in their hearts as much as anyone detest? The Barons of King John are famous for the Magna Charta and Liberty. The parliament of Charles stands up before the world for the final extinction of the Feudal system. The English nation are honored in every clime, lauded by every lip that sings of Freedom, for the abolition of slavery. Let this Legislature add another sparkling jewel to its crown, and by destroying this last badge of servitude, live, endeared forever in the hearts and praises of their grateful countrymen. BALDY.
